Lithuanian Health Minister Aurelijus Veryga warned on Thursday that people's rush to hold celebrations and other gatherings has a price, adding that everybody must understand that they have to continue to practice social distancing and other safety measures.

His comment came after the Health Ministry reported in the morning that 19 new coronavirus cases had been confirmed in the country over the past 24 hours, the highest daily increase in a month.

Lithuania is planning to start in July large-scale testing to find out what share of the population has had the coronavirus and may have developed immunity.
